

What is Photo Documentation?

Stanley Nakamura, AIA (January 2018)

Photo Documentation can be achieved through a dedicated company, the General Contractor or the Architect.

Photo Documentation is used by the General Contractor and the Architect to review any construction related issues.
